Destination Overview

Lodi Wine Country Invites Visitors to Go Beyond the Vineyard

With 85 wineries and more than 400 wine labels, Lodi knows a thing or two about wine. But our story only starts there. Welcoming more than 1 million visitors each year, Lodi, California is a premier wine country destination. Conveniently located 90 miles east of San Francisco and 35 miles south of Sacramento, Lodi is a perfect getaway for couples, families, or anyone with a taste for adventure – and of course great wine.

Whether you're an outdoor enthusiast, foodie, or wine connoisseur, Lodi will surprise and delight. Visit a 5th generation Lodi winery and taste award-winning wine poured by the owner or winegrape grower. Spend the day at Lodi Lake where you can rent kayaks or paddleboards from Headwaters Kayak at the Lodi Lake Boat House or take a scenic boat tour along the Mokelumne River. Take a stroll in historic Downtown Lodi to explore one-of-a-kind shops, galleries, restaurants and tasting rooms. Visit Micke Grove Zoo, San Joaquin County Historical Museum, or World of Wonders Science Museum. There's something for everyone in Lodi Wine Country.

ABOUT LODI WINE

Named Wine Enthusiasts Wine Region of the Year in 2015, Lodi has been growing winegrapes since the mid-1800's and today it is one of the largest California appellations with over 100,000 acres in production.

Although known for its hearty zinfandels ("Zinfandel Capital of the World"), the Lodi appellation is also the leading producer of Sauvignon Blanc, Chardonnay, Merlot, and Cabernet winegrapes.

With 85 wineries, Lodi offers an amazing variety of tasting opportunities. Visitors can find tasting rooms large and small, new and old. Although variety is abundant, one constant remains, the Lodi wine experience. While visiting Lodi wineries, guests often find themselves sipping alongside 4th or 5th generation winemakers who are passionate about their wine.

WINE COUNTRY

Known for its temperate climate and loamy soil, the Lodi region earned its Appellation status in 1986.

Home to approximately 100,000 acres of premium winegrapes and more than 750 growers, Lodi is currently producing more than 100 varietals. Old Vine Zinfandel, Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot, and Chardonnay are specialties of many local wineries, but you'll also find such unique wines such as Spanish and Rhône varietals. Lodi's diverse portfolio of wine is garnering international recognition from industry professionals and wine enthusiasts, alike.

Named among the "World's Next Big Wine Regions" by Bloomberg Business (Feb. 2015), Lodi is not only an ideal location for grape-growing, it's also a premier wine country destination. With 85 wineries and more than 60 tasting rooms, Lodi offers a wide array of unique tasting experiences. Visitors often find that the person pouring their glass is the owner or grape-grower – an experience that brings them back time again.

Many of Lodi's grape-growing families have been in the region for four or five generations. These hardworking, entrepreneurial families continuously seek new ways to grow and enhance their practices, both in growing and winemaking. Lodi vintners' dedication, pride, sense of tradition, and uncompromising commitment to quality show as they skillfully strike a balance between modern science and traditional methods to handcraft world-class wines. This is what catapults our region to new heights and brings international attention to Lodi wine.

HISTORY

How Lodi Got Its Name

Originally called Mokelumne (Mokul is a corruption of the Miwok word for river, and umne means "people of"), Lodi was established as a town in 1869 after a group of major landowners persuaded the Central Pacific Railroad to make it a stop between Stockton and Sacramento. The town of Mokelumne was often confused with the nearby communities of Mokelumne Hill and Mokelumne City, which often delayed mail and shipments of goods and supplies. For these reasons, the town's name was changed to Lodi in 1874. Lodi was later incorporated as a city in 1906.

The true story behind the city's name is often debated, but a few theories exist:

- Settlers of Lodi came from Lodi, Illinois.
- It was inspired by the great racehorse named Lodi.
- In 1796, Napoleon was stopped in Lodi, Italy.

The Mission Arch

The iconic Lodi Mission Arch was built in Downtown Lodi in 1907, the year after Lodi became an incorporated city. Its purpose was to provide a formal entrance to the grounds of the Tokay Carnival, the first Lodi Grape Festival. Today the Arch looks the same as it did when first built, only with one notable difference: a California Bear now rests atop the structure, facing north.

Added in 1910, the bear was originally made of papier-mâché and faced south; it was rebuilt in the 1940's and turned north to face the Capitol City of Sacramento in 1956.

History of Zin

Known as the "Zinfandel Capital of the World," Lodi's vineyards produce about 40% of the premium Zinfandel in California. Many of Lodi's old growth Zinfandel vines date back to the 1880's and early 1900's. Lodi's Zinfandel grapes were able to survive throughout the 20th century, even during Prohibition. At that time, heads of households were allowed to make 200 gallons of wine each year under the Volstead Act, a law that Lodi capitalized on by shipping grapes all over the country to satisfy the market for home winemaking. In the 70's and 80's, demand grew for the region's Zinfandel grapes when White Zinfandel gained mass-market appeal. In 1986, the Lodi region was officially recognized as an appellation and winemakers began to put "Lodi Appellation" on their labels.

AGRICULTURE

Located in California's Central Valley, San Joaquin County is part of what's referred to as "The Greatest Garden in the World" and the "Nation's Salad Bowl," where fresh fruits, vegetables, and nuts are produced, packaged, and shipped all over the world. Some of the region's top crops include: almonds, apples, cherries, tomatoes, walnuts, and winegrapes. It is also famous for blueberries, nectarines, peaches, and asparagus.

The agricultural land surrounding Lodi has been known for well over a century for its deep, rich, fine, talcum powder-like soil (classified as Tokay sandy loam). This fertile valley soil is complimented by Lodi's dry, Mediterranean climate and mild temperatures. Together these natural elements provide an ideal environment for crops.

Early settlers of Lodi grew wheat and barley; in 1880, San Joaquin Valley was producing the largest wheat crop in the world. When wheat prices dropped, the Mokelumne River area's high water table allowed for a flourishing watermelon industry. In fact, between the late 1880's and 1900, Northern San Joaquin Valley held the title of "Watermelon Capital of the World." By the time the market for watermelons began to drop in the 1890's, Lodi farmers were transitioning to grapes - specifically Flame Tokay and later Zinfandel and Carignan. Today Lodi accounts for 18% of California's total winegrape production, with more winegrape acreage than Napa and Sonoma counties combined.

VITICULTURE & SUSTAINABILITY

The Lodi American Viticultural Area (AVA) was recognized by the federal government in 1986, and seven smaller AVAs within the Lodi area were added in 2005. The Lodi AVA is one of the largest in California at approximately 550,000 acres and has more than 100,000 acres of winegrapes farmed by more than 750 growers, many of whose families have grown grapes for over a century. The region's annual yield of nearly 600,000 tons of grapes is valued at over $300 million and made up 20% of California's total winegrape production. As the Lodi AVA receives more and more recognition for quality, premium varietal wines, the industry continues to grow.

Lodi prides itself on its sustainable viticultural practices. In 2005, the Lodi Winegrape Commission created the standards for California's first, third-party-certified, sustainable winegrowing program, known as Lodi Rules™. Ranking among the most rigorous and comprehensive programs in the country, Lodi Rules promotes growing practices that enhance biodiversity, soil health, and water cleanliness. It also encourages responsible farming by focusing on land stewardship, employee training, and safety initiatives. As of 2021, over 55,000 winegrape acres were “Certified Green.”

GEOGRAPHY

Lodi is flat terrain at an elevation of approximately 50 feet above sea level. It covers an area of 13.8 square miles, 98.46% land and 1.54% water.

POPULATION

The city of Lodi's population as of 2021 is approximately 68,752.

CLIMATE & AVERAGE TEMPERATURES

Lodi enjoys a mild, Mediterranean climate year-round, cooled each night by the Delta breeze.

SPRING: Mid 70° to low 80°

FALL: 70° to 80°

SUMMER: 90° days, mid 50° nights

WINTER: 50° to 60°
